Commodity Supercycles, written by expert geologist Matt Badiali is a monthly investment advisory that focuses on natural resource investments including small oil and mineral explorers, drilling service providers, power companies, as well as the biggest oil and mining companies in the world.

At Stansberry & Associates Investment Research, they believe the global economy is still in the grip of a long-term bull market for oil, precious metals, and other natural resources the likes of which the world has never seen. Demand is going through the roof, and one of the best places investors can have their money over the next few years is in oil, energy, and mining investments.
